I do not think I could serve another master or mistress, said old John, decidedly. If so be you wanted a servant-- Then, said Mabel, you would be mine, of course; but that cannot be; and I have been thinking, that if you had a garden of your own-- a nursery garden, I mean, you would be independent. - I was thinking of that myself, ma am, said old John, with a pleased expression at finding his wants divined-- and if--but I don t like to say it--there, I can t, he said, walking to the window. John was going to say, ma am, interrupted Betsy, seeing that Mabel looked puzzled, that if it would not hurt your feelings, he should like to keep on the old garden still--if he could have a cottage built where our house stood--if, that is, you do...
